"M. Traugott, the head of the Polish national government, together with Krajewski, Focyski, Zulinski and Jezioranski, the chiefs of the different departments, were hanged this morning on the glacis of the citadel. The sentence of death passed upon eleven officials of the national government have been commuted in some cases to hard labor, and in the others to imprisonment in a Siberian fortress." And so closes the latest bloody tragedy of the Polish revolution.

A FAIR EXCHANGE.—One of our men in the trenches before Petersburg acting-under a promise of safety from the rebels, went to the enemy's line to exchange some papers, and they took him paper and all. This breach of faith was considered a proper subject for retaliation. A corporal, disguised as an officer, ventured out in front of another portion of the line, and hold-ing out a package of papers, express-a wish to exchange them for Southern papers, "Come over here, and we will exchange with you," a rebel called out. "Meet me half way," our corporal replied. His firmness on this point soon brought out a gray back officer and a Major at that. "Glad to see you," said the corporal. "Do you see that man behind that tree with a musket. You are my prisoner, and if you open your head, or don't follow me, you are a dead man." The Major followed and is now a prisoner.-Subsequently an offer was made to send back the man they had taken prisoner in exchange, but our boys could not see it.

The New York Post, in speaking of Mr. Lincoln's administration, says:-"it is not to denied that its arbitrary arrests, its suppression of journals, its surrender of fugitives without judicial warrant, and its practical abandonment of the Monroe doctrine, have produced a wide and deep feel apprehension and disapproval. The abition of all the genuine lovers of Democratic government in this country has, and is, to conduct the war in such a manner as to prove to the world that the most gigantic revolt that was ever recorded can be put down, by the energies of the people, without disturbing the fundamental institutions of the nation, or at any rate, without the slightest degree infringing their spirit. The masses of the people, who feel so keenly that their only security and hapiness depends upon the rigid observance of all those guarantees of natural rights and liberties which are the peculiar glory of our State and Federal Constitutions, are jealous of the slightest appearance of a departure from them, and ever ready to vindicate them by their suffrages.'

In Canterbury, New Zealand, when a person becomes a habitual drunkard—the fact is published in the papers by the magistrate before whom the case may be proven, and all persons are warned against selling the drunkard liquor, under the penalty of £20 fine and three months imprison-

A certain judge having been called upon, at a public meeting, for a song, regreted that it was not in his power to gratify the company. A wag, who was present observed, "he was much surprised at the refusal, as it was notorious that numbers had been transported by his voice."

A correspondent tells of a chap who HOUSEKEEPERS was drinking at a counter, and withal being tolerably tight, after several attempts to raise the glass to his lips, succeeded in getting it high enough to pour the contents inside the shirt colfar, and set the glass down with the exclamation: "That's good, but a lit-tle too much ice, Mr. Barkeeper."

Quilp is a great admirer of children and says he likes crying ones best .-A matron, with a baby in her arms, smiled at his odd fancy and asked him the reason of it. "Why, you see, madam," observed Quilp, "I have ob-served in well-ordered families as soon as a child cries they carry it out of the room."

If a General invades an enemy's country and meets with a check he thinks it a misfortune. If a man applies for a loan of money and receives a check he considers it no misfortune at all.

A sea captain might make sure of a supply of chickens during the longest voyage by putting enough eggs under the hatchway.

The Canadian girls are said to be enchanted at the sight of a British officer in his searlet uniform. Their eyes have the scarlet fever.
